

The FCC should move very cautiously on any matters that involve censoring broadcast content. Regulation of the public airwaves should be focused on ensuring that time is set aside for public service, educational, arts and unbiased news programming rather focusing on the narrow content issues.